The external chakras

Amongst the major chakras, there are 9 external chakras which are situated above the head and below the physical body. All are found in the astral plane, except the 8th (in the etheric plane) and the 13th (in the buddhic plane).

This explains why certain people, who only sense the etheric world think that they have merely 8 chakras.

The six above our head are named the 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, and the 13th chakras and the three below the ground are the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd underground chakras.

These chakras progressively become active as a result of our spiritual evolution. Their principal function is to establish a deeper connection with the universe.

Besides the fact we can activate them to establish a Merkaba at different levels, each of them can be activated for a very specific function.

The 13th chakra (400 m above the head) enables you to connect to Alcyone, the Pleiades' central sun as well as the central sun of the earth. It is situated in the buddhic plane and aligns us to our divine self together with black holes. It allows astral and space-time travel. It facilitates the connection with galactic beings that exist beyond the 24th dimension. It is the principal source of galactic energy in our body. It allows us to understand our stellar origins and connects us to the Pleiadians. It can be activated in groups and assists the entrance of galactic energy into our solar system.

The 12th chakra (175 m above the head) aligns us to our Sun and spiritual beings up to the 24th dimension. It increases our creative power : thus becoming creators of our own reality.

The 11th chakra (40 m above the head) is aligned to the earth (Gaia) and to water. It enables us to take action and heal on a planetary level. It aligns us with beings up to the 19th dimension. It can be put into alternative mode, that is switched off, if there is danger surrounding us. In this case, deactivate it as this chakra can become polluted.

The 10th chakra (7 m above the head) aligns us to living beings (humans, animals, plant-based life, minerals) and spiritual presences up to the 13th dimension. We can activate it for healing with the hands, as its frequency has healing power and it can also be used for self-healing.

The 9th chakra (1.5 m above the head) creates cosmo-telluric energy breathing and boosts the circulation of internal energies. It purifies the channels and meridians. It aligns us to the human race and enables us to act on the collective consciousness. It can be used in a group, to act with an even greater power.

The 8^e chakra (50 cm above the head) helps disconnect the mind to attain a higher level of consciousness. It can be activated for meditation, to connect to emptiness and to resynchronize (or to be in resonance) with the original matrix.

Knowing their position enables us to visualise them during their activation and sometimes to purify them if necessary.
Given here are their average positions as they vary slightly from individual to individual.

Initialisation of the superior chakras

The superior chakras are not all 'initialised'. By testing above your head you can determine which ones are still inactive. It is much easier to test with another person. The majority of people already have the 8th and 9th initialised.

For example, if you don't sense something at the place of the 10th chakra, it means that this chakra has not be initialised. The procedure is as follows.

Procedure

Up until the 12th chakra, invite the archangel Azrael to intervene. Azrael will initialise the chakras one by one. It is necessary to leave a few days between each initialisation. Ask your guardian angel who will know best how to advise you.
